

Ezio Andreta Bio Skecth

Ezio Andreta is an economist with a large experience in Science, Technology and Innovation. He served from 1972 to 2006 in EU Commission . As Director he contributed to the definition and implimentation of different EU Science and Technology Framework Programs, assuming the direct responsability and the management of Energy, Trasport, Nanotechnology, Smart and Advanced Materials, Industrial Technolgies Programs.

He managed as President different National Organisations dealing with science and technology, in particular the Italian Agency for the Promotion of the European Research (APRE) and the Italian Innovation Agengy. He chaired some European and international Commettees and has been appointed in many Scientific Committees.

He published many articles on science and technology and taught in different Universities in Italy and abroad. Today he is teaching “Busines creation in a globalisation economy” in LINK Campus University in Rome and is the coordinator of the CNR S&T Foresight Project.